Rector Valeiras convened the retreat at 12:25 p.m. and welcomed everyone. He introduced new board member Carrie Chenery, the new constituent representatives, and the group from McKinsey & Company.

***********
The retreat was organized into five sections:

A. Presentation by McKinsey on the potential economic impact and structural changes in society in a post-COVID world.
B. Presentation by McKinsey on trends in higher education and how Virginia Tech is positioned to adapt to those trends.
C. Break-out session to identify and discuss the most important questions that Virginia Tech needs to address. Participants were grouped into three groups based on themes identified in pre-retreat interviews that McKinsey conducted with board members: Growth, Diversity and Inclusion, and Costs and Operations. The groups considered priorities, opportunities (“never waste a crisis”), and re-thinking traditions.
D. Presentation by President Sands on the implications for Beyond Boundaries and Virginia Tech’s strategic plan. (Attached)
E. Break-out session (same groups) to determine priorities.

President Sands summarized the discussion with four what-if statements:

1. What if students, faculty, and staff could be anywhere in the world engaged in learning communities and still be fully engaged with Virginia Tech?
2. What if Virginia Tech were known as the best in the world at convening diverse talent to take on challenges from a holistic human-centered perspective?
3. What if Virginia Tech engaged learners from cradle to grave? (i.e. lifelong learning)
4. What if wealth, income, and/or zip code were not factors for determining access and success at Virginia Tech?

The retreat concluded at 5:00 p.m.
