Summary of the Ut Prosim Imperative Advancing Diversity Lecture
Presented by Menah Pratt-Clarke
January 9, 2018

The Ut Prosim Imperative lecture at the 2018 Advancing Diversity Conference is a series of reflections about Virginia Tech, informed by the Advancing the Human Condition conference, the work of the Council on Virginia Tech's History, Beyond Boundaries, InclusiveVT, the new branding efforts, our motto, the changing demographics in the state of Virginia, and the strategic planning process. The goal of the talk was to offer the concept of the Ut Prosim Imperative as a cohesive and unifying theme for our identity as an institution that closely connects these seemingly disparate concepts. The central assertion is that our motto creates an obligation to prepare our students to be leaders in an increasingly diverse world impacted by religion, language, race, culture, politics, technology, and economics. The land-grant imperative (creating opportunities for citizens who have often been outliers and outsiders), the demographic imperative (responding to the changing demographics in Virginia), and the business imperative (meeting the workforce needs of the state) challenge Virginia Tech to be a destination for talent that reflects the diversity of society. Equally importantly, the Ut Prosim Imperative argues that Virginia Tech must create and sustain an environment and community that provides students with a tool kit that allows them to be leaders in a diverse society with a commitment to advancing the human condition through a comprehensive appreciation, understanding, and respect for different identities, backgrounds, and experiences.
